More people have gone missing in the Rainie district swamp.

An airplane has crashed into a swamp in the Rainie district a few months ago. However, neither the aircraft nor the passengers have been found.

Several SDF troops then went to the swamp, but they too have disappeared.

The entrance to the swamp has now been sealed off and investigations are ongoing.

The swamp in Rainie district has been getting increasingly bigger over the years and is now so huge that it covers one third of the district.
Citizens won't stop complaining about the foul smell that emits from the swamp.

Until the government finds out the cause of the problem, by all means, please stay away from that swamp!

GRAB

Trash!

Useless.

TOSS

I wonder if there is a treasure or two buried here somewhere.

WET..

WET..

I'm getting much deeper into the swamp. The bottom is getting very deep here.

It's getting pretty dark, so I think I'll rest here for today...

I see flat ground on the other side, which is good. I'll just pitch my tent there.

WET..

But I don't really see any plane or bodies here. Did the plane really crash?

DRIP

Hm?

What in the world is this?

Has the swamp been neglected for so long that its composition changed?

The viscosity's thicker than most mud...

STIIICK

Well, whatever.

I'm not a land manager or anything.
I'll be leaving in a couple of days anyway.

DOOOM!!!

W-what was that?!
An earthquake?
Or did another plane
just crash?!

Besides,
something smells...

FART?

Ah, right...

I saw it on TV a few years ago.

It was on the, er...

RUB...

The Science Channel that was talking about a local swamp...

RIIIII

IIIP!!!

Aaah!

I remember now...

S-cells eat the organism and then copy it...

MSKAH WORKS

At last, we have discovered a new species!

It may look like a Sarracenia, but in fact, it's not.
It's a new species of cells, the "S-cell", that has been born from mere mud. It copies the genetic structure of Sarracenia, and the form it takes looks just like Sarracenia.

Interestingly, we found much of the Sarracenia's DNA in this.

S-cells continuously feed on particular species and obtain its DNA.

However, the outer layer of it consists of mud, and its copy abilities seem to be incomplete.

Professor, does this Sarracenia eat insects?

That, we still don't know.
Not much has been confirmed yet.

Professor, is it possible for a S-cell to copy humans?

Most likely not.

Aside from this Sarracenia, we have discovered a few S-cell microorganisms that can copy abilities. However, so far, this one is the only type that can become this large.

GRUUU...

At that time, I didn't have much interest in that channel.
I just happened to watch it on a whim.
But I still remember those words.

AAAGGHH!!

Oooogh!!

"It probably can't copy humans."

A strange phenomenon has been sighted in the marshes Rainy district!

What kind?

It's too far to tell, but the swamp has turned white.

Roger. Report your location. We must investigate that phenomenon at once.
