

VICTORIAN VAMPS Part II

12th October 1900: "Mysterious illness" may be behind recent spate of high society deaths.

Ominous times indeed as the most brilliant medical minds in London are bewildered by this disease.

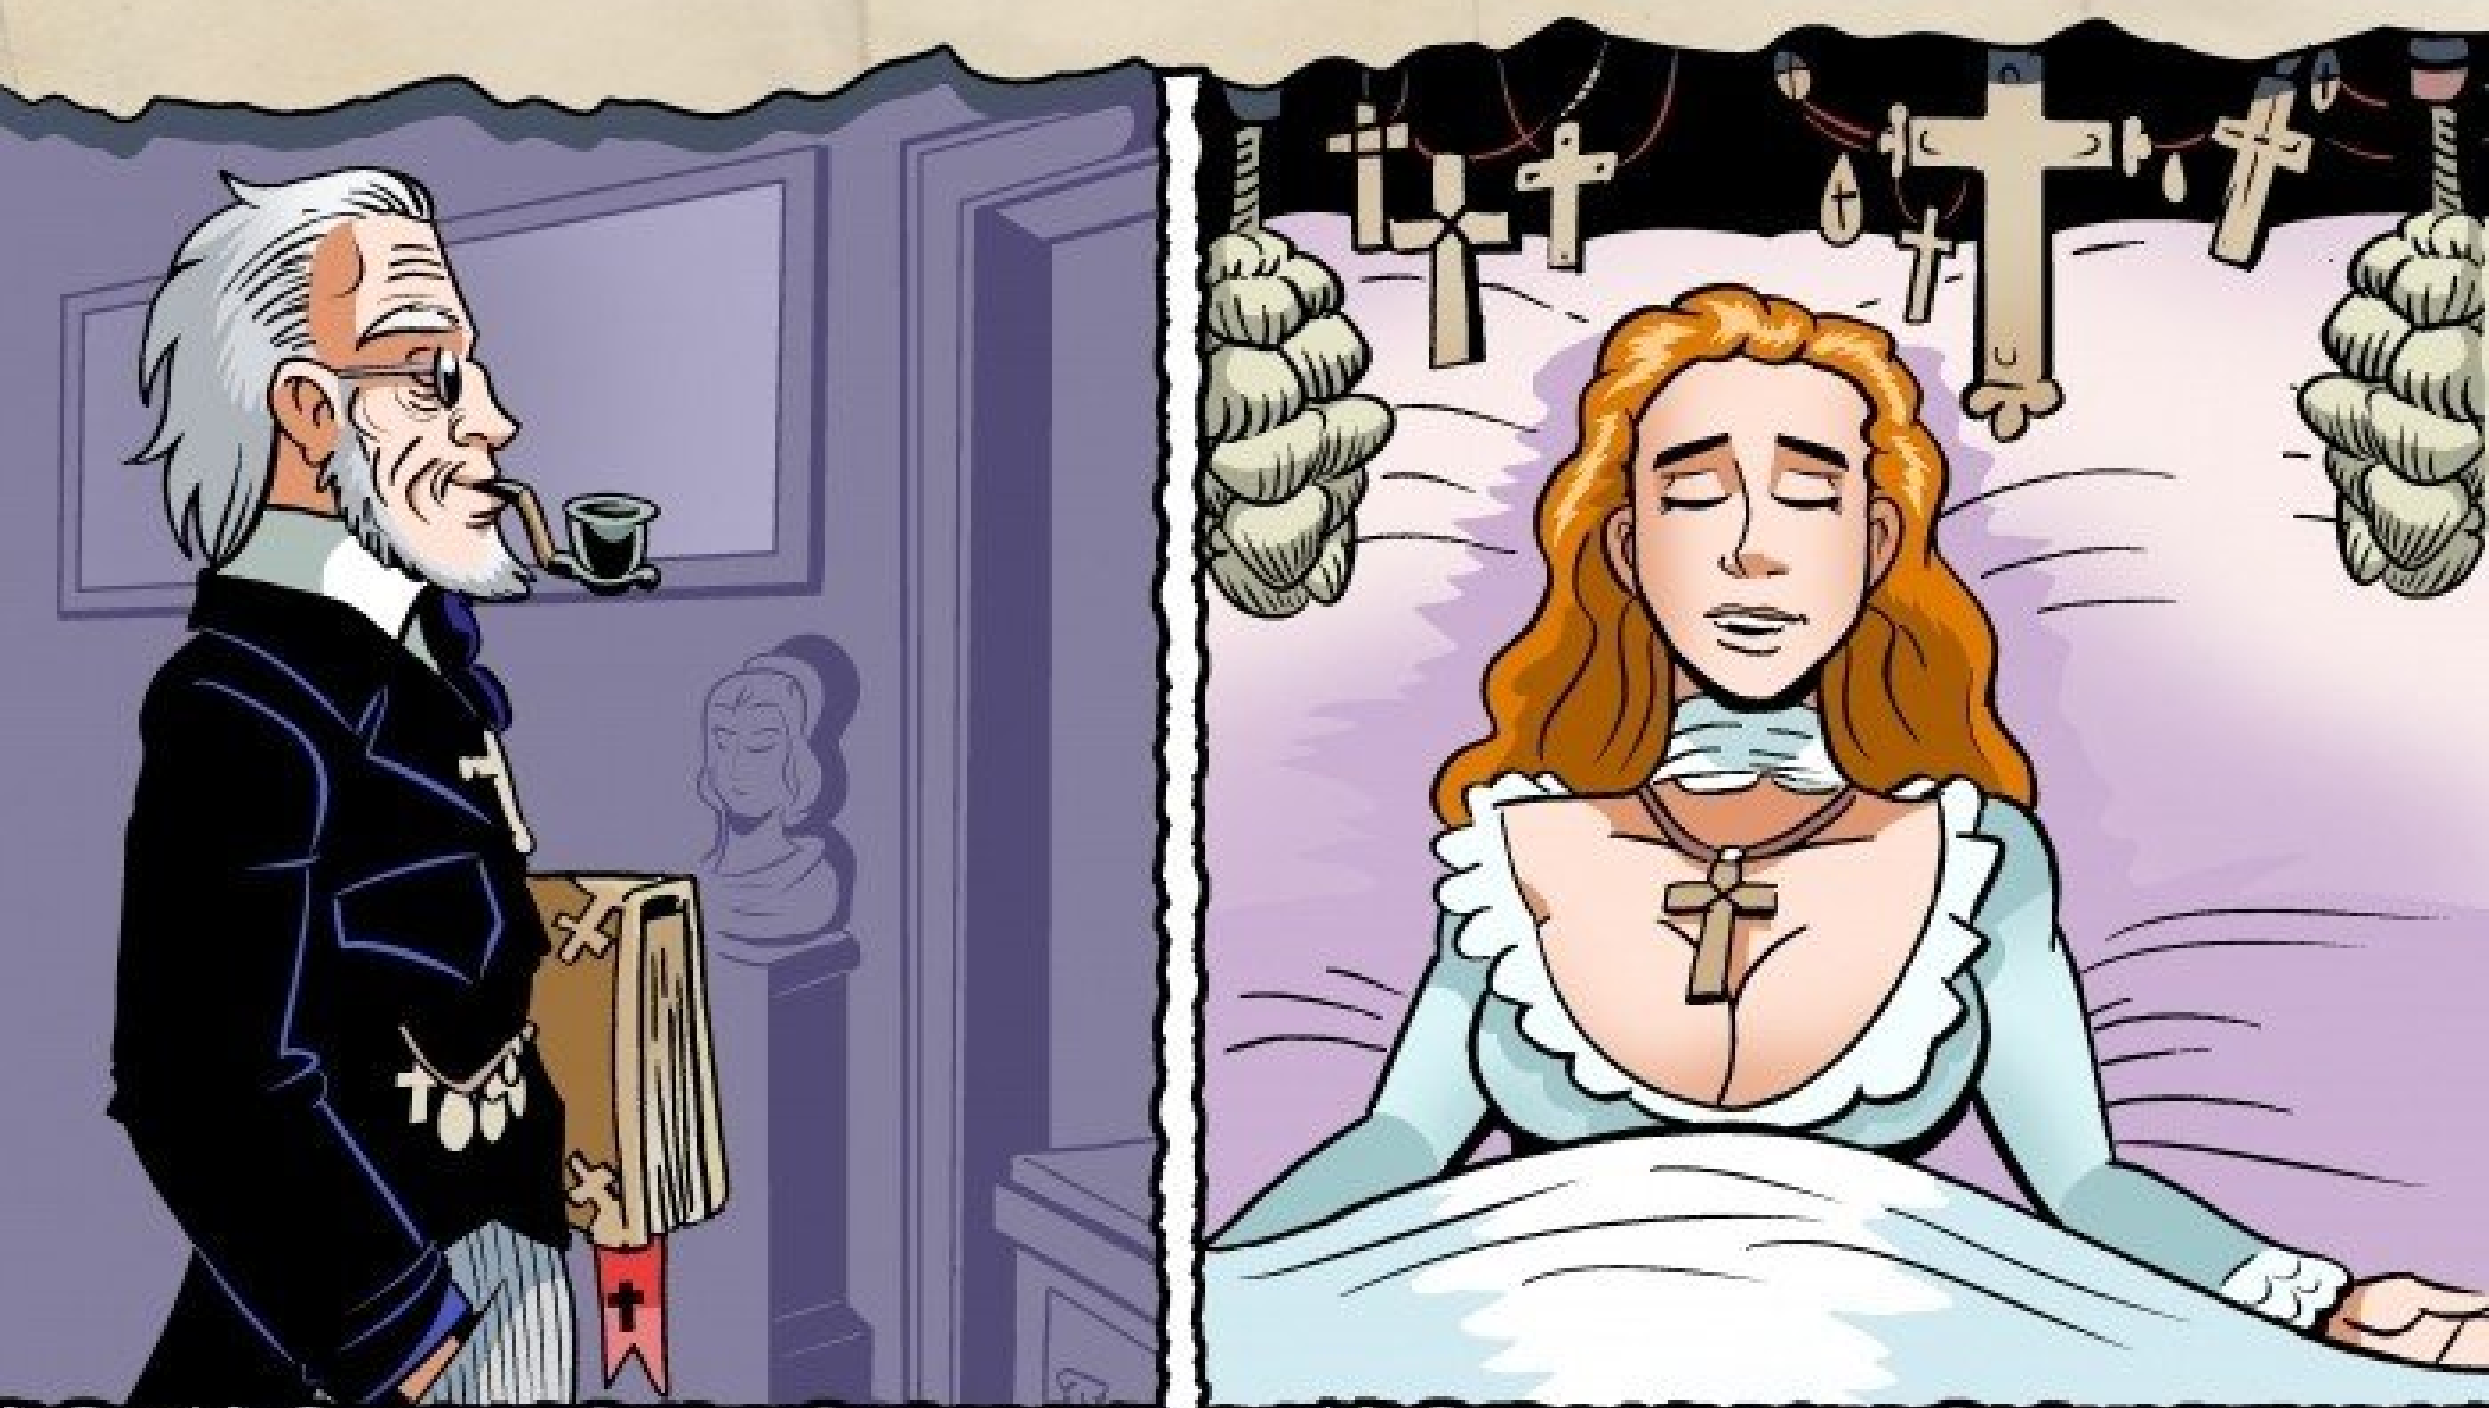

17th October, 1900: "More cases of illness surface."

19th October, 1900: Learned professors of modern medicine advise "fresh air, clean linen, and copious bedrest."

20th October, 1900: Readers are advised to by no means put their faith in folk cures peddled by charlatans from less modern nations.

10th November 1900: Authorities note rise of missing persons, advice caution at night.

11th November 1900: In light of more abductions, officials "consider curfew."

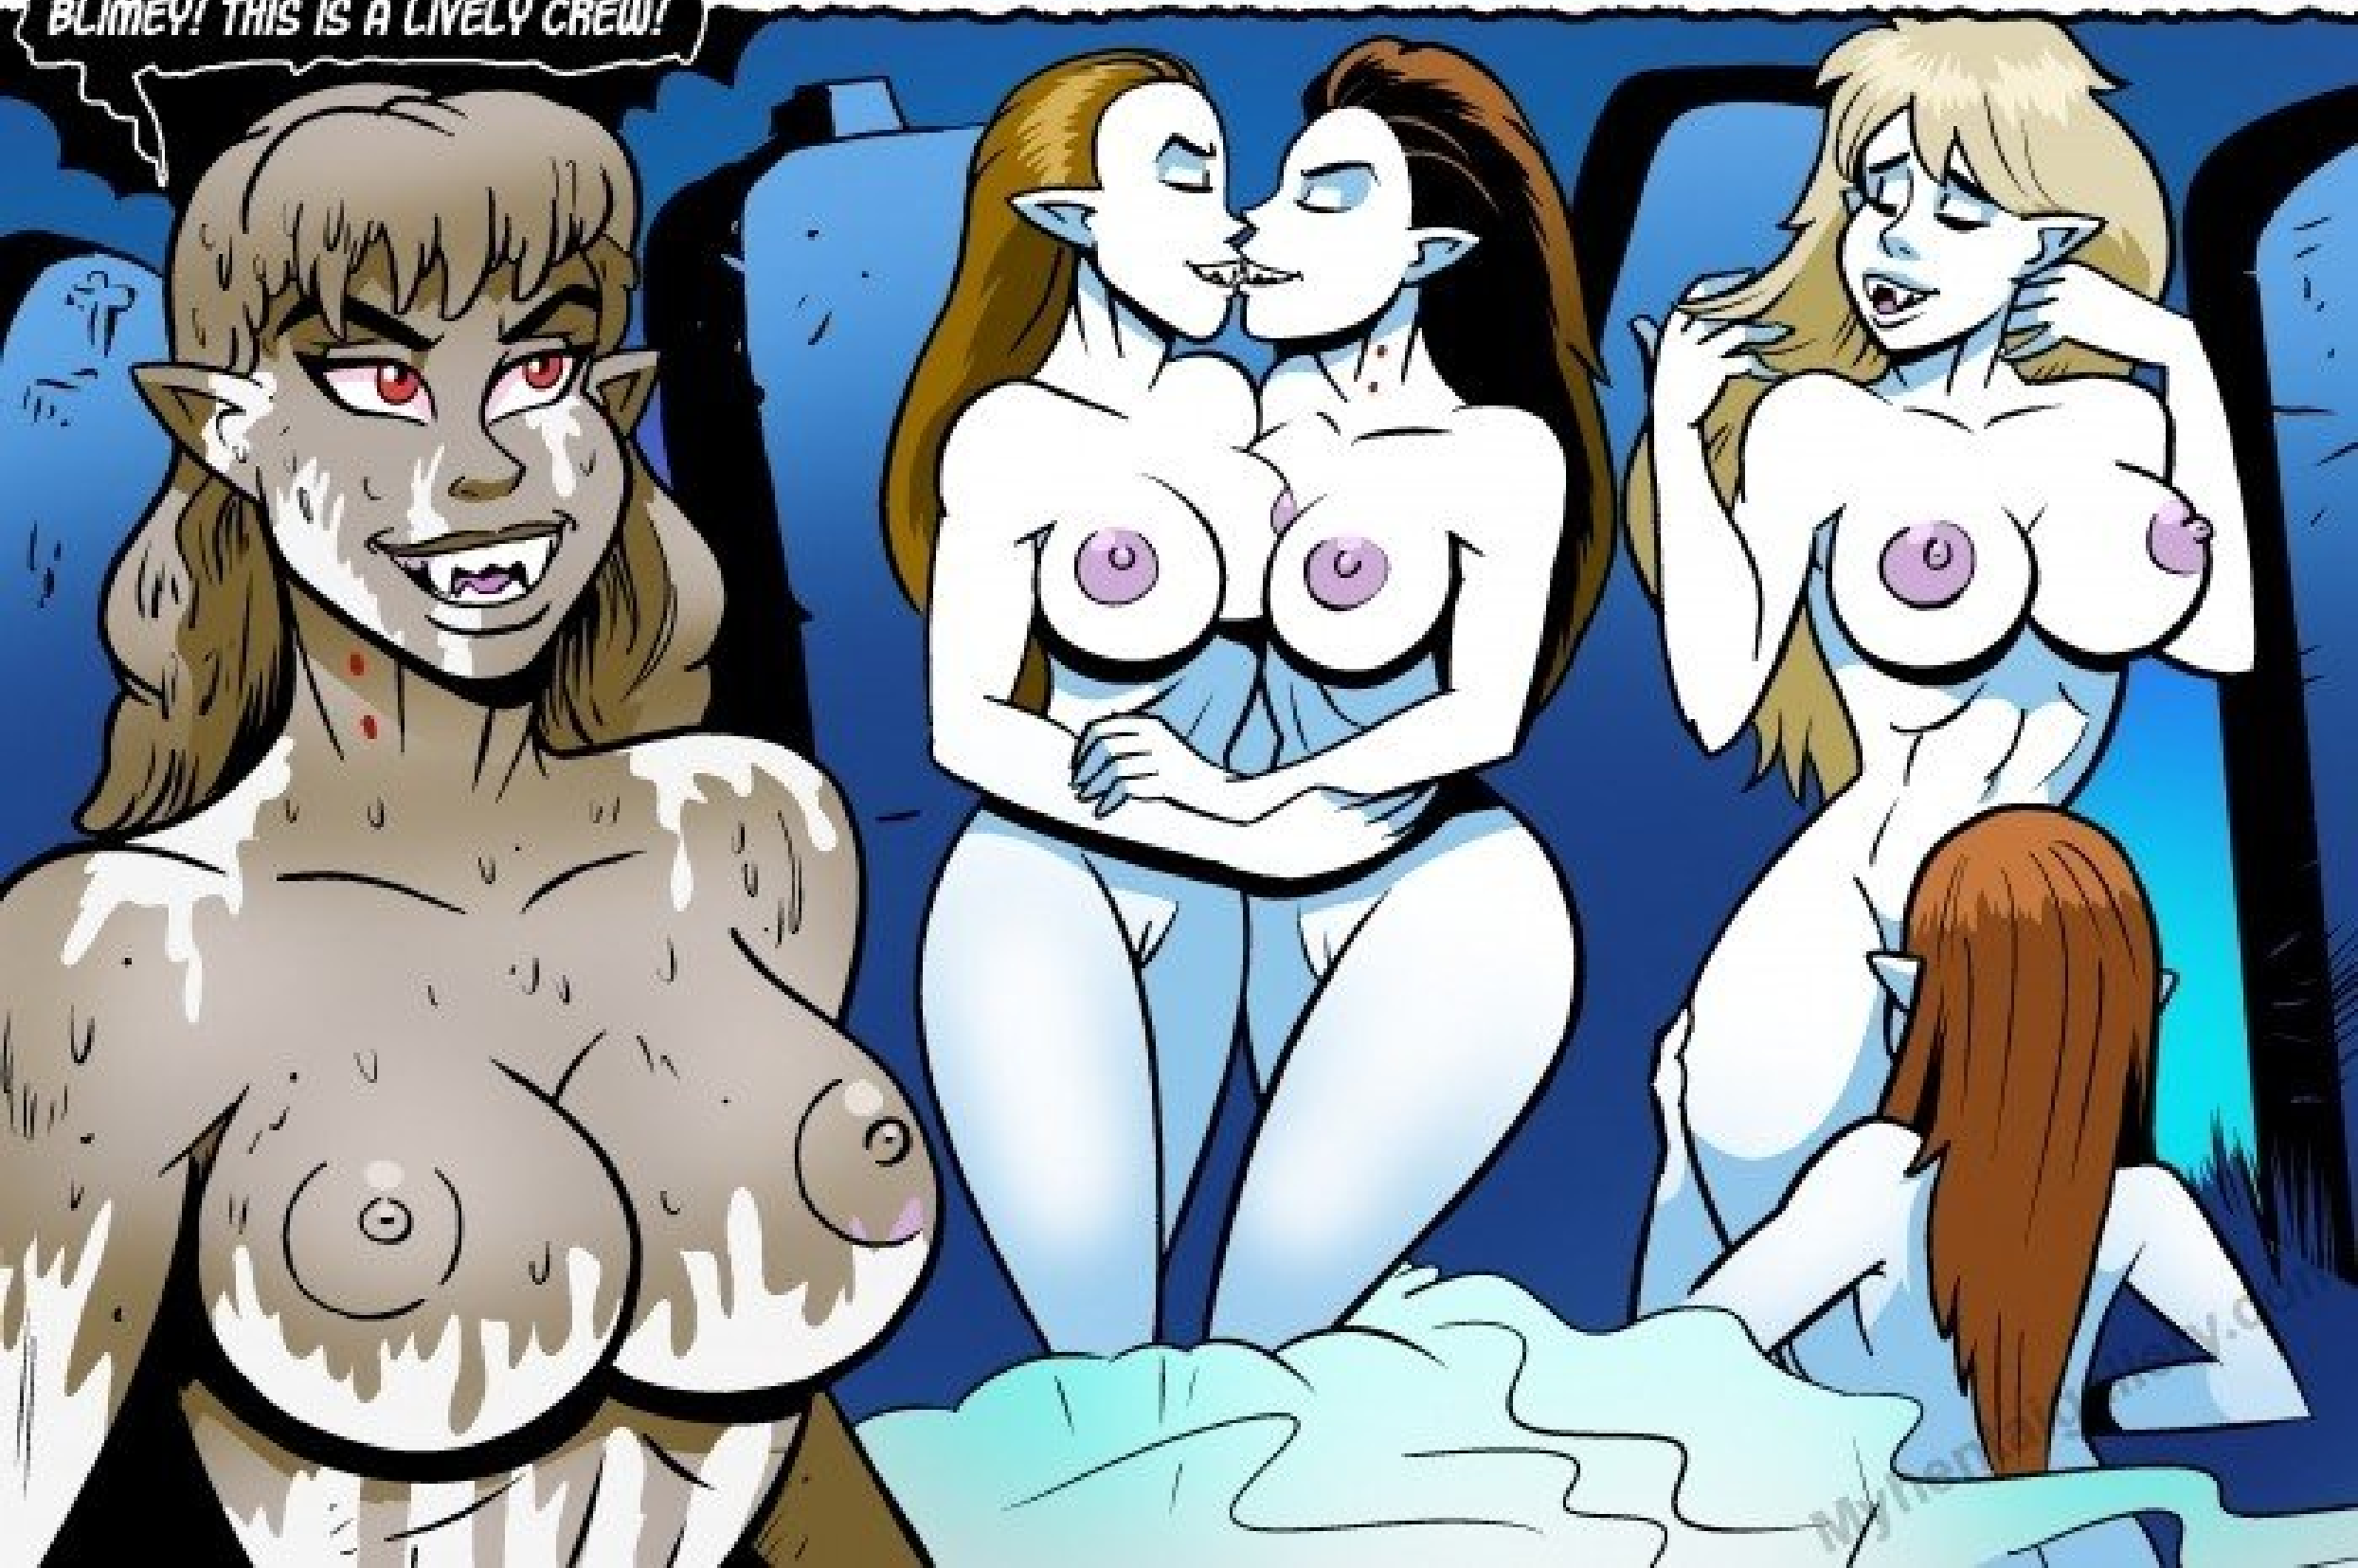

12th November 1900: Curfew in place,
populace ordered indoors past sundown.

THE PAUPER'S GRAVEYARD...

HISSS!
BLEEDING
ADA! IT'S GOOD
TO GET OUT O'
THERE!

BLIMEY! THIS IS A LIVELY CREW!

13th November 1900: Terror strikes London!
